General Summary

Dr. Dhillon is committed to providing comprehensive cancer care to all her patients. She believes that the best care is provided through creating strong relationships with patients and their families along with open communication to guide them through their diagnosis and treatment. She strives to be a guide in each patient's cancer journey, providing them with the education, counseling and recommendations so that each patient can make the best decisions regarding their treatment options. She treats solid tumors, leukemias and lymphomas, along with benign blood disorders. Her research has been focused on issues related to cancer care access in the community along with understanding needs in under-served populations.
