General Summary

David Gregorio, D.O. is a hematologist and medical oncologist in Cleburne, Texas. He recently joined Texas Oncology after completing his hematology/oncology fellowship at UT Health San Antonio. In fellowship, his research focus was on geriatric oncology, aspiring to improve outcomes for older adult patients with cancer. During fellowship he was selected as chief fellow where he served in leadership and medical education, refining educational content of the fellowship program.

Dr. Gregorio cares for patients with a variety of hematologic conditions and solid tumor malignancies. He strives to create a therapeutic relationship with his patients, partnering with them to create individualized treatment plans based on the latest scientific advancements and personal preferences of each patient. He believes each patient deserves the best care from their medical team and hopes each patient feels how much our team cares for them at Texas Oncology-Cleburne.

Dr. Gregorio's interests include practice and quality improvement, research in solid tumor malignancies, leadership, clinical education, and striving for the best for his patients.
