General Summary

Carolyn Matthews, M.D. serves as director of integrative medicine for the Baylor Charles A. Sammons Cancer Center.

Education

Dr. Matthews majored in English Literature at Williams College, where she was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa and graduated Magna Cum Laude. She then attended the Medical College of Virginia and was invited into the Alpha Omega Alpha honor society. She stayed at the Medical College of Virginia for residency in obstetrics and gynecology and served as chief resident in her final year. Her fellowship in gynecologic oncology was completed in 1991 at The University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston, Texas; while there she served as a junior faculty member. Dr. Matthews completed a two year fellowship in integrative medicine with Dr. Andrew Weil at the University of Arizona in 2008, and in 2010, completed training in medical acupuncture with Dr. Joseph Helms. She is also certified in functional medicine.
